

TURNING TOWERS

Change can be exciting, bring fresh opportunities, but it can also be scary, especially when it could mean the relocation of your home or business. Turning Towers will explore the NSW Government plan to revitalise the inner city suburb of Waterloo and the issues facing the diverse community of people who live there and have strong ties to the area.

What happens when an entire community of up to 4000 public housing tenants is 'redeveloped'? How can we deal with the challenges ahead for those dependent on public and social housing while allowing for significant urban development? How can a community stay connected during a time of dramatic and rapid change?
